

Years 9–10 assessment techniques and conditions

Humanities and Social Sciences — Civics and Citizenship

This document outlines assessment techniques and response conditions that could be used to achieve range and balance within an assessment program. Schools should consider the local context, and the age and capabilities of the students, when selecting appropriate assessment techniques, modes and response conditions.

Description	focuses on researching a specific problem, question, issue, or hypothesis through the selection, collection, analysis and/or interpretation of data, sources or information which may result in conclusions. It uses research, investigative practices, or processes in a particular context and occurs over an extended period of time.	focuses on responding to a problem, question, stimulus and/or series of focused tasks within a scenario or context. This may involve using a process to solve a problem, or to inform new actions and/or understandings.	focuses on responding independently to seen or unseen assessment item/s under supervised conditions and in a set time frame. Assessment item/s may include question/s, scenario/s, and/or problem/s.
Learning area advice	Students research a contemporary civics and citizenship issue or question through the location and analysis of information from sources, to develop a response.	Students respond to a contemporary civics and citizenship challenge or scenario using civics and citizenship concepts and applying these to a real-world context.	Students respond to assessment items that may include seen or unseen stimulus, related to political and legal systems and/or contemporary civic issues. Note: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Seen stimulus should be provided with sufficient time for students to adequately engage with the materials prior to the examination. • Unseen stimulus should be information that has not been directly used in class.
