Thanks to the wonders of technology, most parts of the body can be replaced.

When I make Grandma's cake, it's not quite right; something is missing.

Collectors are on an endless quest to find the one that is missing.

When the fancy gear is missing, you have to make do with what you've got.

Missing you, missing home. But not missing…

Informative

Your task is to write a report or a historic account which informs the reader about the significance of something that is missing. This could be abstract or concrete.

Use one of the pieces of stimulus as a starting point or source of ideas. Give your informative text a title.

- Tell the reader what the subject of your report or historic account is and clearly identify what is missing.
- Describe or explain different aspects of the subject to show the significance of the missing part/s you have identified.
- To conclude, you could provide a summary of what you have described or even suggest a future course of action.

Something overlooked in a crime scene may mean the criminal escapes justice.

The extinction of a species weakens the ecosystem.
