

Reverse chronology

Drama 2019 v1.1

Examples provided in this resource are not exhaustive. Teachers will find their own threads and links to investigate and make connections between aspects of background; meaning, context and purpose, and influences on chosen texts.

Highlight the bubbles and make the connections as you and students investigate influences and impacts.

Reverse chronology for historical understanding

Within each unit, reverse chronology is an effective approach to investigate arts practice. This approach begins with a contemporary focus and follows logical pathways backwards to learn about relevant historical, cultural and traditional styles and art forms. Reverse chronology follows a cause-and-effect pathway to understanding influences on artists, styles and practices. This differs from a customary chronological approach that would begin in the past and follow a sequential path to the present.

The benefits of a reverse-chronology approach to learning about historical traditions of the art form of drama include:

- helping an understanding of ourselves, and the decisions and choices made by artists in the present by examining and acknowledging the influences and events that affected previous generations
 - fostering research skills in an inquiry learning model in which students pose questions about the causes and effects of influences and compare dramatic forms of past and present times
 - ensuring enough time is dedicated to focus on relevant historical practices
 - engaging students who are more interested in ideas that relate to themselves and the time they inhabit, which enables them to follow connecting pathways more effectively
 - understanding how knowledge of historical forms and practices helps an understanding of those of the current day.

Unit 3: Challenge

Subject matter

- interpret and analyse, using a reverse chronology approach, scripted drama and professional live or recorded live theatre, from contemporary practices to inherited traditions that make a social comment, to identify and evaluate meaning and purpose, applying their knowledge and understanding of the dramatic languages of selected Theatre of Social Comment styles*, considering
 - elements of drama (e.g. character, contrast, dramatic focus, language, mood, movement, place, relationship, role, situation, space, symbol, tension, time)
 - conventions of selected styles such as
 - § Epic Theatre (e.g. didacticism, alienation, narration, historication, use of song, gestus, direct address, multiple role-taking, projected image/placard) or
 - § Theatre of the Absurd (e.g. word-play, sound and noise used as spectacle, disconnected and non-communicative speech, unusual use of silence and pause, combining real and non-real techniques, dexterity and precise timing, extreme variation from serious to comic, vaudevillian) or
 - § Contemporary Political Theatre including Satire (e.g. irony, parody, exaggeration, juxtaposition, double entendre, reversal of normal order, allegory, intertextuality)

Unit 4: Transform

Subject matter

- interpret and analyse, using a reverse chronology approach, scripted drama, and professional live or recorded theatre, from contemporary practices to inherited traditions, to
 - identify and evaluate meaning and relevance to a 21st century audience, by applying their knowledge and understanding of the dramatic languages of selected styles, considering
 - § elements of drama (such as character, contrast, dramatic focus, language, mood, movement, place, relationship, role, situation, space, symbol, tension, time)
 - § conventions of selected styles:
 - Greek theatre (such as chorus, heightened emotion and action, mask, presentational acting); or
 - Elizabethan theatre (such as heightened emotion and action, iambic pentameter, soliloquy, direct address, aside, poetic image, presentational acting); or
 - Neoclassicism (such as heightened emotion and action; language as lyrical, formal, rhythmic and rich with imagery; elevated movement, drawing on presentational use of gesture, including techniques of commedia dell'arte)
- conventions of Contemporary performance (such as fragmentation, hybridity and openness of form, intertextuality, hypertextuality, appropriation, site-specific performance and mediated performance, incorporating the use of performance technologies)

Contemporary performance (definition from Glossary — Drama 2019 v1.1)

- a body of work that builds on an aesthetic history beginning in the 1880s with Alfred Jarry and early Dada experiments; it has developed through the avant-garde and Performance art of the 1980s and continues into our postmodern contemporary condition.
 - Contemporary performance is often non-narrative, technically rigorous and characterised by openness of form; it unsettles perception, demands critical engagement from audiences, addresses conceptual debates within aesthetics and draws on a diverse range of cultural interests.
 - conventions of Contemporary performance include intertextuality, hypertextuality, hybridity and openness of form, fragmentation, appropriation, integration of live, site-specific and mediated performance.
 - Contemporary performance is hybrid work that integrates text, physical theatre / dance, visual theatre, non-linear form, objects, music, costumes, lighting, image, sound, sets, and vocal expression into complex interactive systems.
