Senior External Syllabus

Polish

Syllabus for the Senior External Examination

2008 (amended 2012)
This syllabus is based on the Subject Outline for Polish, which was developed and published by the SACE Board, South Australia. The subject outline and examination format are determined by the Collaborative Curriculum and Assessment Framework for Languages (CCAFL), which is a national model for the teaching, learning and assessment of language subjects with small candidatures.

1. Rationale

The study of languages is an integral part of a general education, and the importance of knowing additional languages is recognised in The Adelaide Declaration on National Goals for Schooling in the 21st Century (1999) and the National Statement for Languages Education in Australian Schools: National Plan for Languages Education in Australian Schools 2005–2008.

Learning additional languages widens horizons, broadens cognitive and cultural experience, develops communicative and intercultural competence and opens up new perspectives for learners, as well as for their own language and cultural practices. Learning another language extends, diversifies and enriches learners’ cognitive, social and linguistic development.

Information and communication technologies (ICTs), trade and commerce have brought Australians into closer relationships and more frequent interactions with people of other cultures, countries and communities. In such an environment, learning another language takes on a sense of necessity and urgency. Language can be practised and used effectively in a domestic context. Cultural diversity within the borders of states is common in the modern world. Australia needs to continue its commitment to maintaining a pluralistic society where languages are valued.

Learning another language involves communicating in a way that is appropriate to the sociocultural context in which the language is used. It involves using language to comprehend and convey meaning. Learning languages contributes to and enriches candidates’ intellectual, educational, linguistic, personal, social and cultural development. It requires and improves intellectual discipline and systematic study habits. These habits are characterised by effective planning and organisation, incorporating processes of self-management and self-monitoring.

Because candidates need to reorganise their thinking to accommodate the structure of another language, they develop cognitive flexibility and problem-solving ability which can be applied when problems and solutions are not evident, as well as when critical thinking and creative approaches are required. As a result of candidates’ increased awareness of the ways in which relationships are expressed in language, they develop clear thinking and clarity of expression. Language study gives insights into the nature, purposes and styles of language and promotes a greater sensitivity to and understanding of languages in general, including English. Literacy skills acquired in another language enhance skills in one’s first language.

Why study Polish?

Polish is a valuable language for Australians to learn.

- Polish is a major Slavonic language and the official language of Poland. It is one of the most widely spoken languages in Eastern Europe and is spoken by approximately 50 million people worldwide. As a result of migration there are Polish-speaking people living in Europe, the United Kingdom, Canada, North and South America, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

- Polish is a language of economic importance to Australia and the world. Poland is currently the largest market in Central Europe and is one of the largest markets for the European Union’s (EU) export. Poland is one of Australia’s trading partners and many Australian companies conduct business in Polish-speaking countries. As a full member of the NATO Alliance, Poland plays an active part in the process of European integration.
Knowledge of Polish gives access to a rich heritage that has contributed to many fields of endeavour. The influences of Polish movements in areas that include science and technology, music, the visual arts, theatre and film, architecture, social sciences, exploration, politics, and the pioneering work done in these fields, have been felt worldwide. Polish has a long tradition as a literary language, dating from the tenth century. Its importance in the twentieth century was recognised when Poles were awarded four Nobel Prizes for Literature. Names like Nicolaus Copernicus, Marie Sklodowska-Curie (the only woman to win the Nobel Prize twice), Frédéric Chopin, Krzysztof Penderecki, Ignacy Paderewski, Joseph Conrad-Korzeniowski, Henryk Sienkiewicz (Quo Vadis), Roman Polanski, Andrzej Wajda, Tadeusz Kosciuszko, Sir Paul E Strzelecki, Lech Walesa and Karol Wojtyła (Pope John Paul II) are among the most important in world history.

Australia has a long and continuing tradition of Polish immigration and the Polish community is one of Australia’s largest community groups. The first person of Polish descent who came to Australia was the botanist Johann Forster. Forster accompanied James Cook on his second Pacific voyage (1772–75) as official naturalist. His son, George, was illustrator on the expedition. During the 19th century, the Polish established a settlement in Brisbane’s valleys and constituted a non-British minority group in Queensland. Now there are large numbers of Polish-speaking people living in Queensland, chiefly around Brisbane, Townsville, the Sunshine Coast and the Gold Coast.

Study of Polish gives candidates access to the language and culture of Polish-speaking countries and communities. It contributes to their overall education, particularly in the areas of communication, intercultural understanding, literacy, and general knowledge. It also enriches the sense of cultural identity of candidates from a Polish-speaking background.

Knowledge of Polish has distinct advantages in areas as diverse as tourism and hospitality; community services; scientific, medical and technological research; international commerce and banking; information technology; education, and diplomacy. The ability to communicate in Polish may, in conjunction with other skills, increase candidates’ career opportunities in these fields, and may also provide opportunities for tertiary studies in Australia and abroad.

The language

The language to be studied and assessed is the modern standard or official version of Polish. Candidates should be aware of different levels of language, for example formal–informal, some colloquialisms, and slang. Candidates are expected to know that dialects exist; however they are not required to study them.

Description of the target group

This syllabus is intended for candidates who wish to study Polish as an additional language and who have studied the language for a continuous period at junior secondary level in Australia or in a similar environment. Other candidates with less formal language learning experience may also be able to meet the requirements of the syllabus successfully.
2. Global aims

By studying Senior Polish, candidates should:

- enhance their capacity to communicate and interact effectively within and across languages and cultures
- appreciate the interrelationship of language and culture and the importance of intercultural competence
- extend their awareness and understanding of the nature of language through analysing the linguistic systems of Polish
- acquire language-learning strategies that can be applied in other studies
- recognise and appreciate the cultural, linguistic and racial diversity within Australia and globally
- increase the awareness and appreciation of their own language and culture as a result of learning about an additional language and culture
- understand the role of technology in enhancing communication
- expand their post-school options and meet the growing needs of business and industry for language skills and intercultural understanding.
3. General objectives

The primary objective of the subject is that candidates should be able to communicate in Polish. Communication is receptive, involving listening and reading, as well as productive, involving speaking and writing.

While language is experienced and developed through the macroskills — Listening, Reading, Speaking and Writing — which often occur concurrently, proficiency in each of the macroskills may not evolve at exactly the same rate. Thus, the objectives are stated in terms of the macroskills, and each will be assessed separately. The four macroskills should be developed interdependently, integrating the themes, topics and subtopics, functions, grammar and cultural understandings in the syllabus.

Comprehension (receptive communication)

These objectives are expressed in terms of Listening and Reading.

Listening

By the end of the study, candidates should:
• know and understand familiar and complex spoken language
• reason and respond to speakers’ attitudes, purposes, intentions and cultural meanings.

Reading

By the end of the study, candidates should:
• know and understand familiar and complex written language
• reason and respond to writers’ perspectives, purposes, intentions and cultural meanings.

Conveying meaning (productive communication)

These objectives are expressed in terms of Speaking and Writing.

Speaking

By the end of the study, candidates should:
• know and use features of the Polish language
• create spoken language in Polish and respond in situations relevant to their communication needs.

Writing

By the end of the study, candidates should:
• know and use features of the Polish language
• create written Polish language and respond in a manner suitable for the setting, audience and text type.
Attitudes and values

By the end of the study, candidates should:

- understand that learning a language is a continuous process through life
- willingly interact with others in Polish
- understand that attitudes and values, their own and those of others, are embedded in culture
- develop a view of the world shaped by intercultural understanding
- understand that language and culture are interdependent.
4. Perspectives on language teaching and learning

The basic principle underlying the study of Polish in the senior phase of learning is learning in communicative contexts. Communication encompasses the exchange and negotiation of meaning between individuals through the use of verbal and nonverbal symbols in aural, oral, visual and written modes. It involves receptive and productive processes through the application of language learning to new situations.

Language competency is acquired at varying rates and depends on a variety of factors including: exposure to the language, range and quality of learning experiences and continuity of studies. Language develops progressively as candidates endeavour to communicate with increasing precision and detail. Their language becomes more complex in form and more varied in vocabulary.

The Australian Language Levels Guidelines (Curriculum Development Centre 1988; see Resources section) states that candidates learn a language best when:

- they are treated as individuals with their own needs and interests
- they are provided with opportunities to participate in communicative use of the target language in a wide range of activities
- they are exposed to communicative data that are comprehensible and relevant to their own needs and interests
- they focus deliberately on various language forms, skills, and strategies in order to support the process of language acquisition
- they are exposed to sociocultural data and direct experience of the culture(s) embedded within the language that they are learning
- they become aware of the role and nature of language and of culture
- they are provided with appropriate feedback about their progress
- they are provided with opportunities to manage their own learning.

The National Statement for Languages Education in Australian Schools: National Plan for Languages Education in Australian Schools 2005–2008 states that learning languages:

- enriches learners intellectually, educationally and culturally
- enables learners to communicate across cultures
- contributes to social cohesiveness through better communication and understanding
- further develops the existing linguistic and cultural resources in the community
- contributes to Australia’s strategic, economic and international development
- enhances employment and career prospects for the individual.

To communicate effectively, candidates should:

- be aware of the sociocultural context in which they are operating
- have an understanding of the linguistic features of the language being used
• become familiar with strategies used to understand and use language
• develop intercultural understanding.

Sociocultural context

Knowledge of the sociocultural context is important to ensure effective communication. Members of cultural communities make individual and collective meaning of experience, and represent their understandings, values and attitudes through language.

Through exposure to authentic materials and realistic situations and, ideally, through personal contact with Polish-speaking people, candidates will gain an appreciation of how speakers of Polish engage with the world.

Linguistic aspects

To communicate effectively, candidates need knowledge and understanding of language features, including grammar, vocabulary and cohesive devices. Candidates are introduced to language structures through the study of various functions in a variety of settings.

The order in which language functions are taught will depend on the teachers’ perception of the candidates’ communicative needs, and on the complexity of the language structures required to express them.

Communication strategies

The communication skills that people learn in their first language are often employed when learning another language; for example, strategies for replacing an unknown word with another word or phrase that will make the meaning clear. Such strategies need to be modelled and candidates should be expected to use them in realistic and lifelike situations.

Intercultural understanding

Intercultural understanding refers to the ability to view the world, not from the single perspective of one’s own first language and culture, but from the multiple perspectives gained through the study of additional languages and cultures. As a result, candidates should be able to develop better understandings of their place in the world and that of others, which in turn contributes to social cohesiveness (National Statement for Languages Education in Australian Schools: National Plan for Languages Education in Australian Schools 2005–2008).

Intercultural language learning requires that candidates adopt an inquiring state of mind, notice and question assumptions and reorient themselves in relation to others. Language cannot be separated from its social and cultural contexts; it involves the integration of language, culture and learning and helps learners to know and understand the world around them, and to understand commonality and difference, global connections and patterns.

The study should enable candidates to engage in various intercultural contexts. The cultural aspects of learning should encompass the variety of people and lifestyles within a culture. Candidates should be aware of the differences that exist within cultures as well as the common features that permeate them. They should also realise that stereotypes may not reflect reality.
5. Macroskills

Language learning focuses on the use of the four macroskills. They are developed independently (speaking is developed by speaking, reading by reading etc.) and interdependently (one skill supports development in others). The greatest transfer of learning is from comprehension, involving listening and reading, to conveying meaning, involving speaking and writing.

A broadly concurrent approach should be adopted. At times one skill might be highlighted and developed, but in general, and over the length of the study, all the skills should be treated equally. Candidates should be encouraged to use Polish text types and modes of communication, reflecting Polish culture. This includes the use of various forms of technology for communicative purposes.

A variety of tasks, which include inquiry and/or problem-solving, promotes the progressive development of the four macroskills.

5.1 Listening

Listening involves comprehending meaning in a range of situations and text types.

Candidates should be encouraged to develop strategies that are appropriate for the task. This may include the use of analysis and inductive reasoning to help comprehension, or listening for gist or specific details. Candidates should be able to actively take part in conversation.

Candidates should be guided gradually to think beyond the meaning of the immediate phrase or sentence and process sections of texts; they should consider cultural aspects of the communication, the speaker’s attitude to the topic, the situation or context, and the audience. Meaning may be enhanced by tone of voice, gesture or other visual means.

Candidates should be exposed to a range of Polish speakers (male and female, young and old). The speed of utterances should be gradually increased and the predictability of meaning reduced.

In one-to-one situations and in groups, candidates should be able to follow, respond appropriately, and interact effectively with a background speaker or speakers.

5.2 Reading

Reading involves comprehending meaning in a range of situations and text types.

Candidates should be encouraged to develop strategies that are appropriate for the task. This may include the use of analysis and inductive reasoning to help comprehension or reading for gist or specific details.

Candidates should be guided to consider the meaning of the immediate word, phrase or sentence in the context of the entire text; they should consider cultural aspects of the communication, the writer’s attitude to the topic, the situation or context, and the audience. Meaning may be enhanced by visual means or other specific Polish conventions.

Candidates should be exposed to a range of text types, with a gradual increase in the level of difficulty and reduction in the predictability of the meaning. There should be variety in handwritten and printed fonts/characters.
5.3 Speaking

Speaking involves conveying meaning in a range of situations and text types.

Candidates communicate with others to negotiate meaning and should progress from using rehearsed language to the spontaneous use of familiar language.

Candidates should be encouraged to express their own ideas and opinions on topics of relevance to them. The focus of speaking is successful communication, which includes the use of appropriate language features and functions, non-verbal devices and cultural practices.

The development of features such as pronunciation, stress, intonation, range of vocabulary and idiom can be assisted by exposure to good models. Taking acceptable risks in speaking is part of the learning process. As a result, candidates’ confidence and control over their use of language may increase.

5.4 Writing

Writing involves conveying meaning in a range of situations and text types.

Candidates write to express information, ideas and opinions on topics of relevance to them. They should consider the audience and adopt a suitable style and tone.

They should be exposed to various Polish written conventions and be provided with opportunities to practise realistic written text types such as forms, letters, reports, articles, emails, notes, stories and cartoons. Writing tasks involve the flexible and original use of familiar language.

Practising grammatical structures in meaningful communicative contexts and in exercises that manipulate structures is necessary to develop proficiency.

By the end of the study candidates are expected, in some contexts, to write a minimum of 200 words of connected prose. The nature of the task should determine the length for any particular piece of writing. Such tasks should also allow the candidate to demonstrate the development of a range of ideas using a variety of structures.
6. Organisation

6.1 Time allocation

For teaching centres preparing candidates for the nationally assessed/interstate assessed examination the recommended number of hours for tuition in the subject based on this syllabus is an equivalent of four semester units.

Time allocation depends on the method of study. Candidates who elect to study without systematic tuition must organise their time according to syllabus requirements and individual circumstances.

6.2 Requirements

The following elements should be included:

- cultural context
- settings
- themes, topics and subtopics
- language functions
- language features (vocabulary and grammar)
- text types
- kinds of writing.

These elements should be integrated in a course of study, appropriate to the linguistic needs of individual candidates. Opportunities should be provided for candidates to develop sufficient competency in Polish to use the language in a variety of ways to achieve the communicative objectives of the course.

Communication takes place in a cultural context that is dependent on specific cultural activities and text types. Within this context, there are settings that reflect more particular social contexts or situations, which in turn suggest the themes, topics and subtopics. In order to express and interpret factual and personal meanings within a topic, the intention or purpose (i.e. the function of language) needs to be taken into account. To express these meanings in connected discourse, the resources of the language system are called upon. These consist of grammar, vocabulary, cohesive devices and the sound and writing systems.

6.2.1 Cultural context

Language and culture are inextricably linked and references to culture in a language program must reflect this connection. Learners should view the world from multiple perspectives gained through study of second and subsequent languages and cultures. Aspects of Polish history, geography, literature, arts and especially characteristics of the everyday life of the Polish-speaking peoples should be integrated into the themes, topics and subtopics selected for language learning. In this way, candidates should develop a cultural understanding of the Polish-speaking peoples, and, through this, develop an empathetic attitude to the world around them, and to commonality and difference.
6.2.2 Settings

Language use in a situation or social context involves a setting and one or more topics. As far as possible, settings and situations should be related to the candidates’ interests. Within the settings, the social roles of the speakers (friend–friend, customer–attendant, adult–child) must be taken into account. The mode and medium of communication (for example face-to-face, telephone conversation, letter, electronic communication, or print) must also be considered.

Settings can be defined as the location and circumstances for purposeful language use, for example a railway station at rush hour.

It is important that the settings chosen stimulate candidates’ interest in language learning and provide authentic opportunities for language use. These include:

- an Australian context in which they can discuss aspects of Australia and their own experiences, opinions and aspirations with someone who speaks Polish
- an overseas context where they can participate in the everyday life of a Polish-speaking community.

6.2.3 Themes, topics and subtopics

The study is organised around three prescribed themes, and a number of prescribed topics and suggested subtopics. These themes have been selected to enable candidates to extend their understanding of the interdependence of language, culture, and identity. All themes and topics must be covered, with at least one topic being studied in depth (see Section 6.2.4). Themes may be studied in any order.

The three prescribed themes are:

- The individual
- The Polish-speaking communities
- The changing world.

The themes, topics and subtopics are the vehicles through which candidates demonstrate achievement of the general objectives, in the sense that they form the focus for the activities and tasks that candidates will undertake.

The theme “The individual” enables candidates to explore aspects of their personal world, for example sense of self, aspirations, personal values, opinions, ideas, and relationships with others. This theme also enables candidates to study topics from the perspectives of other people.

The theme “The Polish-speaking communities” explores topics from the perspectives of groups within those communities or the communities as a whole, and encourages candidates to reflect on their own and other cultures. Aspects which may be covered include traditional social structures, travel and planning a holiday, significant historical and religious events, festivals and ceremonies, and traditional and modern art, architecture and music.

The theme “The changing world” enables candidates to explore change as it affects aspects of the world of work, careers and employment opportunities, technology and innovation, and social and environmental issues.

These themes have a number of prescribed topics and suggested subtopics and have been selected to enable candidates to extend their understanding of the interdependence of language, culture, and identity. The placement of the topics under particular themes provides a particular perspective or perspectives for each of the topics. The suggested subtopics expand on the topics and guide the candidate as to how the topics may be treated. All themes and topics must be covered, with at least one topic being studied in depth (see Section 6.2.4). Themes may be studied in any order.
The topics are sufficiently broad to allow flexibility, but specific enough to be of practical assistance to candidates and teachers. Not all topics will require the same amount of study time.

It is expected that candidates will study a range of oral and written texts in the language in their treatment of themes, topics, and subtopics. Depending upon the purpose of the assessment task(s) set, it may also be appropriate to select texts in English. Similarly, the language that candidates use to respond to a text may be either the language they are studying or English, as appropriate.

Topics should be chosen for reasons of interest, enjoyment and relevance rather than for their specific contribution to linguistic progression. Sequencing of topics should be coherent to ensure linguistic consolidation is achieved.

The length of time and depth of treatment for each topic will depend on a number of factors, including:
- the degree of familiarity that the candidate has with topics studied previously
- the needs and interests of the candidate
- the nature of the language itself
- the linguistic and conceptual complexity of the texts selected for study
- the linguistic and sociocultural distance between the topic and the candidate’s own world and experience
- access to resources.

| Theme 3 | The changing world |
Topics and subtopics

- Migration in the past and present
  For example, reasons, difficulties and adaptation, new life and opportunities.
- World of work
  For example, careers and occupations, employment and unemployment, impact of work on family life, technological change.
- Social issues
  For example, youth issues, disabled people’s issues, environmental issues.

Notes

1. Teachers have the flexibility to use these topics and subtopics as the focus of discussion or to prepare candidates for direct experience in these areas.

2. Teachers may select subtopics not specified in Table 1.

6.2.4 In-depth study

Candidates are required to undertake a detailed study which allows them to extend their understanding of an aspect or aspects of a topic associated with the theme “The Polish-speaking communities”. The study should be based on a subtopic related to one or more of the prescribed topics from the theme, as listed in Table 1. It may be selected from any of the subtopics suggested for study in Table 2, or may range across the prescribed topics.

The subject of the in-depth study will be the focus of the discussion section of the external oral examination. Details of the discussion are under Section 8.1.2 Oral examination.

The in-depth study enables candidates to explore and compare aspects of the language and culture of the Punjabi-speaking community through a range of oral and written texts in Punjabi related to the selected subtopic. This will allow candidates to develop knowledge and understanding of, for example, historical issues, aspects of contemporary society, or the literacy or artistic heritage of the community. The texts which form the basis of this study might include films, short stories, newspaper articles, electronic texts, documentaries, music, songs, painting and oral histories. The length of texts will vary depending on the type of texts, their density and level of complexity. To allow candidates to explore their subtopic in sufficient depth, it is suggested that a range of at least three different kinds of text are selected. These might include aural and visual, as well as written texts.

Note: Candidates are expected to make reference to texts studied.

Teachers may either choose the subject of the in-depth study, and the associated texts or support materials that the class will study, or allow each candidate to choose his or her own subject, and give advice and assistance in selecting and analysing appropriate texts. Some subjects may enable candidates to make comparisons between their learning and their personal experience.

The topics listed in Table 2 include suggestions for areas that might form the focus of an in-depth study. Candidates may wish to focus on one of these areas and expand it to include further areas, or they might choose to incorporate all areas, depending on how closely they can be linked.
Table 2: Suggested subtopics for detailed study

Theme: The individual

Topic: Relationships

Possible subtopics for in-depth study:
- Family values in Poland.
- Responsibilities of women and men in the Polish family today.
- The importance of tradition in the Polish family.
- Portrait of the Polish family through film.

Theme: The Polish-speaking communities

Topic: Visiting Poland

Possible subtopics for in-depth study:
- The positive and negative impact of tourism.
- Sites of cultural and historical importance.
- Polish churches as places of worship, and as art in stone.

Topic: Famous people in science, art, literature and music

Possible subtopics for in-depth study:
- Polish Nobel Prize Winners before World War II and their significance for civilisation.
- Prof. J Zubrzycki as an initiator and propagator of the idea of multiculturalism in Australia.
- Life, times and work of significant figures in the artistic heritage of Poland.

Theme: The changing world

Topic: Migration in the past and present

Possible subtopics for in-depth study:
- The role and achievements of Polish post-war migrants to Australia.
- Aspirations and perspectives of the new Polish generation in Australia.
- The challenge of migration.
Topic: Social issues

Possible subtopics for in-depth study:

• Social effect of technological innovation.
• The results and importance of the environmental “Clean up” campaign in Australia and Poland.
• Disability — the challenge in Poland.

The texts that form the basis of the in-depth study will depend on the availability of appropriate resources. These could include, for example, guest speakers, newspaper articles, websites, documentaries, films, short stories, songs, and oral histories, either in their original form or adapted for language learning. Texts used may also be subtitled, or produced in English, if appropriate. It is expected that at least three different texts relating to the subject of the in-depth study will be selected for analysis, so that candidates are able to explore their subject in sufficient depth. At least two of the texts should be in Polish.

It is suggested that candidates collate evidence of their preparation for the in-depth study. Such evidence may include:

• a list of words, phrases or expressions
• a written plan or cue cards for the oral presentation (in Polish or English)
• a draft of the response in Polish
• a draft of the response in English
• personal notes, paragraphs, or short summaries relating to the text in the candidate’s own words
• charts, maps, diagrams, pictures as appropriate
• a bibliography or references.

6.2.5 Language functions

Language functions are purposes for which language is used. The functions that candidates should be able to use by the end of the study are listed below in four groups.

The order in which functions are treated will depend on teachers’ perceptions of candidates’ communicative needs, and on the complexity of the language structures required to express them. In general, teachers should emphasise high-frequency forms of the language. No rigid progression is recommended.

Functions can be developed to differing extents. Some may be achieved through set expressions and others are more open ended. Many functions will be revisited in the teaching program and at increasing levels of complexity. The order of the functions listed below does not indicate any suggested progression or degree of emphasis.

Socialising

• greeting
• introducing people
• leave-taking
• attracting attention
Exchanging information

- identifying and asking about:
  - people
  - things
  - problems
  - understanding/misunderstanding

- asking about and describing:
  - people (personality traits, physical appearance and ability)
  - things
  - places
  - manner
  - times
  - activities/events/situations (past, present, future)
  - physical features (colour, dimensions, number)
  - experience

- asking for and giving:
  - time
  - cost
  - directions
  - meaning
  - clarification
  - confirmation
  - reasons
  - instructions

- denying
- counting (cardinal and ordinal numbers)
- correcting
- reporting
- comparing

Expressing and finding out feelings, opinions and attitudes

- enquiring about and expressing:
  - opinions
  - preference
  - intention
  - wants and needs
  - fears
  - anger
  - agreement/disagreement
  - certainty/uncertainty
  - possibility/impossibility
  - probability/improbability
  - likes/dislikes
  - pleasure/displeasure
  - approval/disapproval

- expressing:
  - affection
− gratitude
− sympathy
− regret
− hope
− surprise
− praise
− blame
• apologising
• complaining
• congratulating
• complimenting
• encouraging
• contradicting
• predicting

Getting things done and negotiating meaning
• asking for and giving:
  − advice
  − invitations
  − permission
  − decisions
• requesting and offering:
  − help
  − goods and services
  − something to be done
• warning
• giving commands
• accepting/declining
• asking about/fulfilling obligations
• suggesting
• negotiating.

6.2.6 Language features
To express meaning in connected text, the structural components or language features of language systems (written, spoken/signed, visual, nonverbal and auditory) are used. In both spoken and written language these include grammar, vocabulary and cohesive devices. In addition, features of spoken language encompass intonation (patterns of stress, pitch and rhythm), pronunciation and the use of appropriate pause fillers; features of written language encompass paragraphing and punctuation.

Grammar refers to morphology and syntax; that is, the structure of words and sentences in the language.

Grammar is an important component of communication and should not be neglected. Candidates should become familiar with the grammar outlined in this section, through the study of various functions, in a variety of settings. Candidates internalise grammar more efficiently through the communicative use of language structures. Language structures need to be reinforced at regular intervals.
The vocabulary used will be determined by the settings, functions, topics and subtopics selected for study. Although there is no prescribed vocabulary list, candidates should be familiar with a range of vocabulary and idioms relevant to the topics prescribed in this syllabus.

Dictionaries

Candidates should be encouraged to use dictionaries and it is expected that teachers will help candidates develop the necessary skills and confidence to use dictionaries effectively.

Cohesion refers to the way parts of a text link with other parts. This can be achieved by:

- specific language features, for example:
  - pronouns, possessive adjectives, definite and indefinite articles
  - conjunctions and adverbs
  - synonyms, antonyms and homonyms
  - word chains (e.g. synonyms, antonyms, repetition)
  - word sets (e.g. classes and subclasses of words)
- the organisation of the information in a conventional way depending on the text type, for example:
  - a news article usually starts with the main newsworthy information, followed by background information
  - a narrative usually follows the structure of background, complication and resolution
  - a casual conversation consists of taking turns.

6.2.7 Mandatory requirements in grammar

Understanding, manipulating and using the grammatical structures that follow are necessary to enable candidates to attain the language levels required. The structures will be assessed as they occur naturally in communicative tasks.

Candidates are expected to recognise and use the following grammatical items. The examples given are suggestions only.

6.2.8  Text types

Literacy has in the past been centred on language, but it goes beyond print language and incorporates the multiple modes of meaning found in new information and communication technologies. The term “multiliteracies” describes what constitutes literacy in today’s world. Multiliteracies refers to the “multiplicity of communication channels and mass media, as well as cultural and linguistic diversity”. (Multiliteracies: Literacy Learning and the Design of Social Futures, Cope, B and Kalantzis, M, eds, Routledge, London, 2000.)

When we focus on multiliteracies, we keep in mind the importance of cultural contexts in what we are seeing, viewing, hearing and interpreting. We ask questions and listen to different points of view around the kinds of “social futures” we envisage for ourselves in our community and in our world.

Candidates are expected to be familiar with a wide range of text types in their learning and assessment program. Text types for receptive use are not prescribed. The examples in Table 3 indicate the range through which candidates convey meaning and comprehend.

In the external examination candidates may be expected to produce any of the following text types:

- Article  Report
- Blog  Review
- Diary / journal entry  Script of a play
- Email  Script of a speech or talk
- Letter (formal or informal)  Story
- Message  Text of an interview
- Note

See Appendix 2 for the main characteristics of the common text types.

6.2.9 Kinds of writing

In the external examination, candidates are expected to be familiar with, and be able to produce, the following eight kinds of writing:

- personal
- descriptive
- narrative
- imaginative
- informative
- persuasive
- reflective
- evaluative.

See Appendix 3 for the main characteristics of the different kinds of writing.
7. Learning experiences

Candidates should engage in a variety of learning experiences using Polish. These should be candidate-centred, valid and relevant to the needs and interests of the learners. Candidates develop understanding and control of language by using spoken or written language in purposeful ways and in a range of authentic contexts.

7.1 Learning strategies

A range of learning strategies should be used to assist candidates to further their language development through reflecting on the learning processes. Candidates should be encouraged to take responsibility for their own learning. Examples of such strategies are given below.

7.1.1 Metacognitive

Metacognition as a concept is the awareness and understanding of oneself as a thinker and involves thinking about the learning process, planning for learning, monitoring the learning task, and evaluating how well one has learned or used language.

Strategies include:

Planning
- previewing the organising concept or principle or anticipated learning task — advance organiser
- proposing strategies for handling an upcoming task
- generating a plan for the parts, sequence, main ideas or language functions to be used in handling a task

Directed attention
- deciding in advance to attend in general to a learning task and to ignore irrelevant distractors
- maintaining attention during task execution

Selective attention
- deciding in advance to attend to specific aspects of language input or situational details that assist in the performance of a task
- attending to specific aspects of language input during task execution

Self-management
- understanding the conditions that help one successfully accomplish language tasks and arranging for the presence of those conditions
- controlling one’s language performance to maximise use of what is already known

Self-monitoring
- checking, verifying or correcting one’s comprehension or performance in the course of a language task including:
  - comprehension monitoring: checking, verifying or correcting one’s understanding
− production monitoring: checking, verifying or correcting one’s language production
− auditory monitoring: using one’s “ear” for the language (how something sounds) to make decisions
− visual monitoring: using one’s “eye” for the language (how something looks) to make decisions
− style monitoring: checking, verifying or correcting based upon an internal stylistic register
− strategy monitoring: tracking use of how well a strategy is working
− plan monitoring: tracking how well a plan is working
− double-check monitoring: tracking, across the task, previously undertaken acts or possibilities considered

Problem identification

− explicitly identifying the central point needing resolution in a task, or identifying an aspect of the task that hinders its successful completion

Self-evaluation

− checking the outcomes of one’s own language performance against an internal measure of completeness and accuracy including:
  − checking one’s language repertoire, strategy use or ability to perform the task at hand
  − production evaluation: checking one’s work when the task is finished
  − performance evaluation: judging one’s overall execution of the task
  − ability evaluation: judging one’s ability to perform the task
  − strategy evaluation: judging one’s strategy use when the task is completed
  − language repertoire evaluation: judging how much one knows of the target language, at the word, phrase, sentence or concept level.

7.1.2 Cognitive

Cognition refers to the processing of information and application of knowledge.

Strategies that involve interacting with the material to be learned, manipulating the language mentally or physically, or applying a specific technique to a learning task include:

Repetition

− repeating a chunk of language (a word or phrase) in the course of performing a language task

Resourcing

− using available reference sources of information about the target language, including dictionaries, texts and prior work

Grouping

− ordering, classifying or labelling material used in a language task based on common attributes
− recalling information based upon grouping previously done

Note-taking

− writing down key words and concepts in abbreviated verbal, graphic or numerical form to assist performance of a language task

Deduction/induction

− consciously applying learned or developed rules to produce or understand the target language
Substitution

• selecting alternative approaches, revised plans or different words or phrases to accomplish a language task

Elaboration

• relating new information to prior knowledge
• relating different parts of new information to each other
• making meaningful personal associations to information presented including:
  – personal elaboration; making judgments about or reacting personally to the material presented
  – world elaboration: using knowledge gained from experiences in the world
  – academic elaboration: using knowledge gained in academic situations
  – between parts elaboration: relating parts of the task to each other
  – questioning elaboration: using a combination of questions and world knowledge to brainstorm logical solutions to a task
  – self-evaluative elaboration: judging self in relation to materials
  – creative elaboration: making up a story line or adopting a clever perspective
  – imagery: using mental or actual pictures or visuals to represent information, coded as a separate category, but viewed as a form of elaboration

Summarisation

• making mental or written summary of language and information presented in a task

Translation

• rendering ideas from one language to another in a relatively verbatim manner

Transfer

• using previously acquired linguistic knowledge to facilitate a language task

Inferencing

• using available information to:
  – guess the meanings or usage of unfamiliar language items associated with a language task
  – predict outcomes
  – fill in missing information.

7.1.3 Social/affective

Strategies that involve interacting with another person to assist learning or using affective control to assist a learning task include:

Questioning

• asking for explanation, verification, rephrasing examples about the material
• asking for clarification or verification about the task
• posing questions to self
• self-reinforcement.

7.2 Range of learning experiences

A range of learning experiences across the four macroskills should be employed to develop candidates’ skills in using Polish in realistic situations. These learning experiences may be organised in relation to the macroskills, learning processes, technology and/or units of work. Examples are listed under the categories of:

- general activities in the four macroskills (7.2.1)
- activities using a particular learning process (7.2.2)
- activities focused on the use of technology (7.2.3)
- a series of activities for particular units of work (7.2.4).

7.2.1 General activities in the four macroskills

Here are examples of language activities or learning experiences appropriate to Polish.

Primarily for listening and speaking

- listening to radio broadcasts and audio podcasts
- viewing and listening to television programs and webcasts
- listening to public announcements
- conducting and/or answering an opinion poll or survey
- role-playing in specific settings
- talking on the telephone
- listening to an answering machine
- giving an oral report, speech or multimedia presentation
- commenting on photos or videos
- giving instructions and explanations to others
- holding a debate or participating in a discussion
- listening to and speaking with a background speaker
- listening to songs, poems and jokes

Primarily for reading and writing

- reading and writing letters, postcards and notes
- reading and writing advertisements and instructions
- reading and writing pamphlets and brochures
- reading and writing magazine articles and advice columns
- reading news reports and articles from a range of media
- reading cartoons, short stories, poems, song lyrics
- filling out official forms and questionnaires
- accessing information in dictionaries
- reading timetables, graphs and statistics
- writing a diary, journal or weblog
- composing an email or SMS/text message
- reading and responding to a discussion board
- participating in chat rooms/MSN Messenger and forums.
7.2.2 Activities using a particular learning process

The Languages inquiry process is a way of thinking and problem solving that positions intercultural understanding at the centre of candidate learning. In the process, the candidate analyses a collection of texts to identify a focus for the inquiry. Information would need to be reorganised and evaluated to reach a decision or propose a strategy.

As part of this, the candidate would reflect upon:

- values that underpin texts
- personal values and beliefs
- community values.

In this way, intercultural understanding, the ability to know and view the world from multiple perspectives, would be integral to the inquiry process and be evident in the decisions made and the strategies proposed.

Learning by inquiry facilitates a much deeper engagement by candidates with the language they study.

The inquiry process asks the candidate to investigate information and issues presented in a variety of modes and text types in Polish. The candidate does not just translate texts, but engages with them by:

- collecting and organising information
- analysing and evaluating information
- establishing the purpose of texts and the intention of the authors.

Inquiry learning in Polish is facilitated by creating authentic scenarios so that candidates may make decisions about and propose solutions and new approaches to issues, situations and problems. The teacher may specify the topic and the purpose of the inquiry but the candidate should conduct the process and direct their own learning.

The process of inquiry allows for time to consider and reflect on the issues as well as the way in which learning has occurred. This leads to deeper understandings about communication and metacognitive processes.

The following table suggests a way of studying a topic using an inquiry approach. Intercultural understanding is a key component in the Languages inquiry model and allows candidates to focus on an issue from multiple perspectives.
Table 4: A Languages inquiry model

Sample context for learning

A school is establishing an international program for Polish students. You are part of the consultative committee advising on the establishment of the program.

Your task is to develop a student guide to facilitate a successful experience for the visiting students as well as the school community.

You will need to investigate a range of aspects related to Polish and Australian cultural, social and educational life.

</tbody>
</table>

The inquiry process is iterative; information, assumptions, values, attitudes and processes are revisited, challenged, reconsidered and re-examined at any stage of the inquiry.
7.2.3 Activities focused on the use of technology

Various technologies are used in everyday communication and need to play a part in language learning. Technologies can be used to provide valuable learning experiences for candidates and to allow them to engage with the wider world in Polish.

Suggested use of technologies

- writing and receiving emails
- sending e-cards
- word-processing reports
- recording and listening to audio podcasts
- viewing and listening to information via the internet
- participating in discussion forums
- engaging in synchronous chats
- using mobile phones
- desktop publishing of posters, invitations
- viewing DVDs
- accessing online resources
- using electronic dictionaries, translators and calculators
- designing a webpage or viewing websites.

7.2.4 A series of activities for particular units of work

These samples, starting on the next page, involve all four macroskills incorporating various language functions, and a range of learning experiences and strategies. They provide the basis for developing a unit of work with integrated task-based activities.
This theme engages the candidates in an inquiry process through the task below:

You are trying to find a fitness program that suits your needs, but you are looking for something a little different. Because of your interest in Polish, you decide to research the Polish approach to fitness and diet. Investigate approaches that suit your needs and evaluate their benefits. Incorporate aspects of Polish culture that may be beneficial to your goals.

Listening and speaking
- talking about diets and fitness programs
- discussing personal goals and motivation
- asking for advice about health issues and exercise programs
- describing body image and suitability of diets
- interviewing people about exercise, diet and fitness programs
- listening to people giving advice and being interviewed about health issues
- watching television programs about food and cooking
- watching DVDs about exercise and fitness programs
- delivering an electronic presentation comparing and contrasting cultural attitudes to diet and exercise in Australia and Poland

Reading and writing
- reading about diets and nutritional information
- reading about Polish attitudes to food and fitness
- writing a letter to ask about attitudes to health and exercise
- writing a questionnaire about diet and exercise
- designing an electronic presentation in which Australian and Polish cultural attitudes to diet and exercise are compared and contrasted
- presenting a personal fitness plan

Learning strategies
- planning for the upcoming tasks:
  - generating plans for the tasks
  - sequencing main information to be obtained
  - deciding on language functions and vocabulary to be used
  - rehearsing language necessary to carry out the tasks, e.g. delivering an electronic presentation, preparing a questionnaire about diet and exercise
- collecting a variety of texts in Polish relevant to the issue of diet and exercise
- analysing those texts, investigating and evaluating the diet and exercise regimes of both cultures, and developing a personal fitness program that incorporates the best aspects of the Australian and Polish approaches
- organising the information that supports the decision made about the choice of fitness program
- presenting the decision and re-presenting information in a way that supports the strategy.
This activity involves small groups of candidates planning a trip to Poland. They are required to organise the itinerary to include a homestay as well as other accommodation.

Listening and speaking

- telephoning the Polish Consulate to request assistance with plans or brochures
- viewing DVD or online travelogues about Poland
- discussing options and making decisions involving interaction with others
- speaking with a travel agent in Polish about booking flights and accommodation
- communicating information to the group explaining the itinerary
- telephoning the homestay family to give important information
- presenting the finished itinerary to the class

Reading and writing

- writing letters, sending emails or faxes to the tourist office asking for brochures
- locating and collecting information from websites, maps, brochures, magazines and tourist guides on possible attractions to visit
- consulting timetables online and in print form
- estimating costs (including exchange rates)
- preparing a detailed itinerary and writing it in Polish
- planning a journey and compiling a weblog while on the journey
- booking accommodation using hotel websites and online booking forms
- emailing a friend or homestay family to relay plans

Learning strategies

- planning for the upcoming tasks
  - generating plans for the tasks
  - sequencing main information to be obtained
  - deciding on language functions and vocabulary to be used
  - rehearsing language necessary to carry out the tasks
- recording and noting data
- assessing and classifying the information found, including making comparisons
- interpreting relevant tables, diagrams, maps and graphs presented in tourist information
- identifying problems that hinder successful completion of any of the tasks
- checking, verifying, or correcting comprehension of materials consulted
- hypothesising on currency fluctuations
- justifying decisions on destinations
- summarising findings for oral presentation of itinerary to class
- evaluating the outcomes of the language tasks for completeness and/or accuracy before presentation to class.
Theme | The changing world
---|---
Topic | World of work
Subtopic | Part-time work
Activity | Looking for a part-time job

Listening and speaking
- candidates talk about the ideal job or the job of their dreams
- talking about future careers
- telephoning for information about the job
- preparing an interview with the prospective employer
- preparing an oral description of themselves and their suitability for the job
- listening to other people being interviewed
- viewing TV programs on job prospects in Poland
- listening to other young people talking about their aspirations for the future
- interviewing other candidates on their future plans

Reading and writing
- reading CVs from the internet
- reading job descriptions and ads from the internet and newspapers
- writing a CV based on examples seen
- preparing and writing a letter of application for a job
- writing to a penpal about the candidate’s part-time work and their aspirations, work wise, for the future
- comparing and contrasting part-time jobs for candidates in Australia and in Poland

Learning strategies
- planning for the upcoming tasks:
  - generating plans for the tasks
  - sequencing main information to be obtained
  - deciding on language functions and vocabulary to be used
  - rehearsing language necessary to carry out the tasks, e.g. compiling a CV, preparing for an interview with an employer
- hypothesising on future job prospects and careers
- justifying decisions on chosen career
- evaluating their strengths and weaknesses for the job
- identifying steps required to acquire a job
- compiling a list of questions the candidate would need to ask at an interview.
Theme | The changing world
---|---
Topic | Social issues
Subtopic | Current affairs
Activity | Preparing a debate and a campaign on a current social issue

Listening and speaking
- listening to the radio and viewing TV and films to collate required information
- listening to debates on current issues
- presenting an argument on the topic
- discussing, questioning and rebutting other people’s points of view
- telephoning organisations to acquire information
- preparing and presenting a TV/radio advertisement to support a point of view
- preparing a TV/radio debate/interview with invited guests
- presenting the debate to the class

Reading and writing
- collecting information from the media, e.g. newspapers, magazines, the internet
- analysing and organising information required for the task/campaign
- preparing a newspaper/magazine advertisement or article to support a point of view on the social issue
- preparing a webpage on a social issue, including links to other sites
- writing a “letter to the editor”
- reading “letters to the editor”

Learning strategies
- planning for the upcoming tasks
  - generating plans for the tasks
  - sequencing main information to be obtained
  - deciding on language functions and vocabulary to be used
  - rehearsing language necessary to carry out the tasks, e.g. debating a topic with the class
- interpreting relevant material from the media
- note-taking in the debate to produce a simple rebuttal
- cooperating with peers
- justifying an argument or point of view
- summarising an argument for or against the issue
- criticising and evaluating other points of view.
8. Assessment

8.1 Summative assessment

8.1.1 Format of the external examination

The external examination consists of four parts, each of which assesses one of the four macroskills:

- an oral examination, assessing the speaking skill
- a written examination, assessing the skills of listening, reading and writing.

It is essential for a candidate in Queensland to undertake all four parts of the examination. A level of achievement can only be determined if the candidate is awarded a standard in each of the four macroskills.

The examination format is determined by the Collaborative Curriculum and Assessment Framework for Languages (CCAFL), which is a national model for the teaching, learning and assessment of language subjects with small candidatures.

The examination is held in either October or November each year. The oral and written examinations will be set and vetted by a panel appointed by the Senior Secondary Assessment Board of South Australia (SSABSA).

The external examination in Polish is administered by the QSA for Queensland candidates. Please refer to the Resources section of the syllabus for access to information on assessment and past examination papers.

Oral examination (approximately 15 minutes)

Section 1: Conversation (approximately 7 minutes)
Section 2: Discussion (approximately 8 minutes)

Written examination (2 hours and 30 minutes, plus 10 minutes reading time)

Section 1: Listening and Responding
Section 2: Reading and Responding
Section 3: Writing in Polish

8.1.2 Oral examination (approximately 15 minutes)

Purpose

The oral examination is designed primarily to assess candidates’ knowledge and skill in using spoken Polish.

Specifications

The oral examination has two sections.
Section 1: Conversation (approximately 7 minutes)

The examination will begin with a conversation between the candidate and the assessor(s). It will consist of a general conversation about the candidate’s personal world, for example, school and home life, family and friends, interests and aspirations.

Section 2: Discussion (approximately 8 minutes)

After the conversation, the candidate will indicate to the assessor(s) the subject of the in-depth study chosen for the discussion (refer to Section 6.2.4). In the discussion, the candidate will be expected to explore with the assessor(s) the subject of the in-depth study and to refer to the texts studied. The candidate may also wish to refer to personal experiences related to the subject of the in-depth study.

The candidate may support the conversation and discussion with objects such as photographs, diagrams, pictures, and maps. Notes and cue cards are not permitted.

8.1.3 Written examination (2 hours and 30 minutes, plus 10 minutes reading time)

The written examination has three sections. The candidate is allowed to use monolingual and/or bilingual print dictionaries in the written examination.

Section 1: Listening and responding

Purpose

Section 1 of the written examination is designed primarily to assess candidates’ knowledge and skill in analysing information from spoken texts.

Candidates will be expected to demonstrate understanding of general and specific information from spoken texts and to respond, in English in Part A, and in Polish in Part B, to questions on this information. The questions may require candidates to identify information related to:

- the context, purpose and audience of the text
- aspects of the language of the text, e.g. tone, register, knowledge of language structures.

Specifications

Section 1 of the written examination has two parts, Part A and Part B. The texts in both parts will be related to one or more of the prescribed themes (refer to Section 6.2.3).

Candidates will hear six texts in Polish covering a number of text types. The total listening time for one reading of the texts without pauses will be approximately eight minutes (16 minutes in total for two readings of each text).

Some texts will be short, that is, one reading of each text will be approximately 35–45 seconds. Some texts will be longer, that is, one reading of each text will be approximately 90–120 seconds. Each text will be heard twice. There will be a pause between the first and second readings in which candidates may take notes. Candidates will be given sufficient time after the second reading to complete answers.

Candidates will be expected to respond to a range of question types, such as completing a table, chart, list or form, or responding to a message, open-ended questions or multiple-choice items.

Part A

There will be three texts in Polish, including at least one shorter text and at least one longer text. Questions on the texts will be written in English for answers in English.
Part B
There will be three texts in Polish, including at least one shorter text and at least one longer text. Questions on the texts will be written in English and Polish for answers in Polish.

Section 2: Reading and responding

Purpose
Section 2 of the written examination is designed primarily to assess candidates’ knowledge and skill in analysing and responding to information from written texts, and in analysing and exchanging information in response to a text.

In Part A, candidates will be required to demonstrate understanding of written texts. Candidates may be required to extract, summarise, and/or evaluate information from two texts. Candidates may be required to respond critically to the texts and to compare and/or contrast aspects of both texts.

In Part B, candidates will be expected to demonstrate both an understanding of a written text and the ability to exchange information by responding in Polish to information provided in the text.

Specifications
Section 2 of the written examination has two parts, Part A and Part B. The texts in both parts will be related to one or more of the prescribed themes (refer to Section 6.2.3).

Part A
Candidates will be required to read two texts in Polish of 400–500 words in total. The texts will be different in style and purpose but may be related in subject matter or context.

Questions on the texts will be written in English for answers in English.

Part B
Candidates will be required to read a short text of approximately 150 words in Polish. Candidates will be required to demonstrate understanding of the text through processing the information from the stimulus material. Candidates will produce a written response that addresses the purpose, a context and an audience, as specified in the question. Candidates will be required to produce a text type drawn from those prescribed for productive use in the syllabus (see Section 6.2.8).

Candidates will be expected to write a response of approximately 150 words in Polish.

The question will be written in English and Polish for a response in Polish.

Section 3: Writing in Polish

Purpose
Section 3 of the written examination is designed primarily to assess candidates’ ability to express ideas through the creation of original text in Polish.

Specifications
Candidates will be required to write a text involving presentation of ideas and/or information and/or opinions. There will be a choice of two to four questions, which will be related to one or more of the prescribed themes. Questions will accommodate a range of candidate interests and will be set to ensure that candidates are given opportunities to produce different kinds of writing (e.g. personal, descriptive, narrative, imaginative, informative, persuasive, reflective or evaluative, either individually or in combination) by, for example:
• having different purposes, audiences and contexts
• requiring different text types (see Section 6.2.8: text types for productive use).

Candidates will be required to write an original response of approximately 250 words in Polish. The questions will be written in English and Polish for a response in Polish.

8.2 Determining exit levels of achievement

A QSA panel will award each candidate an exit level of achievement from one of the five categories:

- Very High Achievement
- High Achievement
- Sound Achievement
- Limited Achievement
- Very Limited Achievement.

The panel will award an exit standard for each of the macroskills Listening, Reading, Speaking, and Writing. The standards associated with the four macroskills are described in Table 5.

These standards are related to the exit criterion associated with each macroskill. The criterion of comprehension is associated with Listening and Reading; the criterion of conveying meaning with Speaking and Writing. Both criteria are derived from the general objectives described in Section 3.

When standards have been determined in each of the macroskills of Listening, Reading, Speaking, and Writing, the following table is used to award exit levels of achievement, where A represents the highest standard and E the lowest. The table indicates the minimum combination of standards across the criteria for each level.

Awarding exit levels of achievement

<tr>
<td>LA</td>
<td>At least Standard D in any three macroskills</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>VLA</td>
<td>Standard E in the four macroskills</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The level of achievement will be subsequently reported to each candidate by the QSA on a statement of results. The candidate’s achievement may contribute towards the Queensland Certificate of Education (QCE) and the calculation of an Overall Position (OP) and Field Positions (FPs).

Note: As judgments of achievement in Authority subjects are made by matching the evidence provided by candidates’ responses to examination questions with the standards descriptors outlined in the syllabus, a standard can only be awarded where evidence has been demonstrated.

In the absence of evidence for a macroskill*, e.g. non-submission of candidate responses, or where a candidate has not sat a part of the external examination, no result can be recorded for that part of the examination. A level of achievement can only be determined if the candidate is awarded a standard in each of the four macroskills. (See Section 8.1.1.)

8.3 Special consideration

Under certain circumstances, special arrangements or consideration may be available to candidates for the senior external examination. The special consideration provisions are detailed in the annual Senior External Examination Handbook, available on the QSA website at <www.qsa.qld.edu.au>.

Missing an examination for any reason cannot be the basis for an application for special consideration.
9. Resources

9.1 QSA website

The QSA website provides essential resources for all candidates for the Senior External Examination. The website address is <www.qsa.qld.edu.au>.

The following information is available (current at time of first printing in 2008):

Senior External Examination Handbook
The handbook gives information about:
- how to nominate to sit the examinations
- teaching centres that provide tuition for the subjects
- examination timetable
- important dates relating to the Senior External Examination.

Subject resources
Exams and assessment reports from previous years for Polish are available on the VCAA website. <www.vcaa.vic.edu.au/vce/studies/lote/polish/polishindex.html>
The QSA website has a direct link to the VCAA website.

Notices to candidates
Information may be provided to help candidates prepare for the examination.

Notices to teaching centres
Information may be provided to help tutors and candidates prepare for the examination.

9.2 Text and reference books

A wide variety of textbooks and resource materials that could be used as sources of information are available. Book suppliers provide information regarding current publications.

9.3 World Wide Web

Note: All URLs were correct at the time of printing.

Many interactive and static websites can be used to enhance the study of Senior Polish and often include useful resources.

Some particularly useful sites include:
BBC Polska.com <www.bbc.co.uk/polish>
Intercultural Language Learning and Teaching in Practice <www.iltlp.unisa.edu.au>
9.4 Newspaper reports

Many newspapers carry regular pages, columns and features relevant to the study of Senior Polish. Local newspapers can also be a source of useful data. The compilation of news files on particular topics can broaden a candidates’ knowledge base and provide a valuable resource.

9.5 Periodicals

Journals and periodicals provide current, relevant information. Librarians should be able to help find useful periodicals.

9.6 Electronic media and learning technology

A wide range of videos, DVDs and television recordings are available on a variety of topics related to the study of Senior Polish. A variety of computer software programs and CD-ROMs may be useful — as learning tools, to gain access to information presented in a variety of forms, and to help candidates gain ICT skills. Educational program distributors are able to supply updated resource lists.

9.7 Organisations and community resources

A variety of government and community organisations provide personnel, advice, resources and information which can aid study of Senior Polish.

Some of these include:
Australian Federation of Modern Language Teachers Associations Inc. (AFMLTA)
<www.afmlta.asn.au>
Australian Polish Association and Seniors, PO Box 527 Pacific Fair Qld 4218

Appendix 1: Glossary

Attitudes: The way the speaker or writer feels about the topic, the situation and the audience, for example adoring, empathetic, amused, diffident, disgusted, sad, angry, bitter.

Authentic text: A text (original or modified) that would be accepted by a background speaker for communicative purposes.

Background speaker: A native speaker of a language or a person who has had significant exposure to and/or knowledge of the language and culture.

Coherence/coherent: An underlying theme or organisation of a text.

Cohesion/cohesive devices: Language items that convey grammatical or word relationships between different parts of texts or within sentences. Can be through the reference system (for example, pronouns, possessives, use of articles), through connectors (for example, conjunctions, adverbs) and through word sets and word chains (for example, synonyms, classes and subclasses of words).

Communication strategies: The ways candidates with limited command of language express meaning (for example, by circumlocution) and attempt to keep conversation going (for example, asking for clarification or meaning).

Fluency: The ability to write or speak with ease: includes good speech production, effective communication, background-speaker-like use of pauses, rhythm, intonation, stress, rate of speech and use of interruptions and interjections.

Gist: Substance or essence of a matter.

Intention: The speaker or writer’s purpose; for example, to inform, amuse, (re)establish cordial relationships, admonish, shock or embarrass into action.

Intercultural understanding: The ability to view the world, not from the single perspective of one’s own first language and culture, but from multiple perspectives.

Language features: Parts of the language system; for example, phonemes (sounds), words, phrases, sentences, utterances, discourse.

Metacognitive strategies: Strategies involving thinking about the learning process, planning for learning, monitoring the learning task and evaluating how well one has learned or used language.

Pause fillers: Expressions to fill gaps in conversation (for example, er, ummm); routines to keep conversation going, which can be questions to show interest, or feedback such as Did you? Really?, and sympathetic noises such as … aah … ooh.

Productive (composing) mode: A mode that involves the skills of speaking and writing.

Receptive (comprehending) mode: A mode that involves the skills of listening and reading.

Register: Varieties of language defined according to the characteristics of the context in which the language is used. This includes the situation, which may refer to the subject matter of the variety (for example, science or advertising); mode (whether speech or writing); manner (that is, the social relations between the participants as shown by variations in formality).

Spontaneous language: Spontaneous language refers to the use of language that has not been deliberately prepared in advance and in which unrehearsed utterances are used. A talk that is prepared in advance with or without notes or memorisation is not spontaneous, but unrehearsed discussion with the audience at the end is spontaneous.

Structure: The arrangement of words and morphemes into larger units, for example phrases, clauses, sentences.

Syntax: Ways words combine to form sentences or the rules that govern the formation of sentences.

Text: A coherent piece of spoken/signed, written, nonverbal, visual or auditory language, or some or all of these in combination, produced in an interaction in a social context.

Text type: A conventional or characteristic type of spoken or written text; for example, face-to-face conversation, TV news bulletin, short story, newspaper editorial, personal letter, poster.

Tone: The emotional overlay and/or intent in a text, for example angry tone in a letter to editor with intent to criticise and confront.

Appendix 3: Kinds of writing

Main characteristics of different kinds of writing

The following descriptions outline the main characteristics of the eight different kinds of writing. They are intended as a guide only; candidates would not be expected to include all aspects in their writing.

Personal writing

- Creates a sense of person/personality for the writer in the reader’s mind.
- Establishes a relationship/intimacy/empathy between the writer and the reader.
- Usually employs first and/or second person; subjective; informal, familiar style/register; often includes emotive language.
- Emphasises ideas, opinions, feelings and impressions, rather than factual, objective information.
- Uses, in reflective writing, the act of writing to help the author understand and unravel his/her own feelings or ideas.
- May, in certain contexts, use contracted language, such as is used in speech.

Descriptive writing

- Vividly portrays a specific person, place, or thing in such a way that gives intensity of focus, allowing the reader to visualise the subject and enter into the writer’s experience.
- While its main purpose is to describe a particular living, non-living or natural phenomenon, it can also persuade, inform or move emotionally.
- Describes aspects of the subject and is rich, vivid and lively in its detail.
- Uses sensory language elaborately.
- Uses figurative language such as simile, hyperbole, metaphor, symbolism and personification, showing, rather than telling, through the use of active verbs and precise modifiers.
- Writing can vary from formal to informal, depending on the purpose and audience.
- Significant textual features:
  - title *
  - orientation (setting the context) *
  - description of aspects/characteristics

* optional stage

Narrative writing

- Tells a story or part of a story.
- Can use any events, real or imagined, which would make a good story or otherwise suit the author’s purpose.
- The focus of the text is on a sequence of actions.
- It has
− a plot structure:
  · introduction (orientation)
  · rising action
  · climax
  · falling action
  · resolution
− characterisation
− setting
− theme
− narrative stance (point of view)
− narrative devices
− sequencing
− transitions.

• The characters in the narrative have defined identities and identifiable roles and relationships.
• Descriptive language is chosen to enhance and develop the story by creating images in the reader’s mind.
• Vocabulary and language use must be related to the writer’s style (e.g. emotive, neutral or poetic) and appropriate to and consistent with the world of the narrative (e.g. the historical period in which the narrative is set).
• Uses mainly action verbs but also many verbs that refer to what the participants said, felt or thought.
• Normally written in the past tense, with many linking words to do with time.
• Dialogue is often included during which the tense may change to the present or future.
• Can be written in the first person (I, we) or third person (he, she, they).
• Can have paragraphs of unequal length; one sentence may even constitute a paragraph to emphasise an important message.

Imaginative writing
• Manipulates the reader’s response to the piece to create the desired impression or response; visual and/or emotional appeal.
• Usually creates a strong sense of context (physical surroundings and atmosphere) and situation.
• Normally includes description (person, place, emotion, atmosphere), so careful selection of language such as adjectives and adverbs (or their equivalents) are important.
• Uses techniques such as variation in sentence length, juxtaposition of different sentence lengths, careful control of structure and sequencing, to add to the overall effect by creating the desired atmosphere or conveying the required emotion.
• May break normal sequencing for added impact, such as in a flashback or in a final disclosure which puts a different interpretation on preceding passages.

Informative writing
• Aims to convey information from the writer to the reader as clearly, comprehensively and accurately as possible.
• Usually uses objective style and impersonal expressions, although the writer may use an informal style to establish a relationship of “friendly helper” with the reader.
• Normally has no particular point of view to convey; if a point of view is involved, the writing becomes either persuasive (aiming to convert the reader to a particular point of view or attitude to convince him or her to act or respond in a certain way) or evaluative (aiming to weigh two or more items/ideas to convince the reader rationally and objectively that a particular point of view is correct).

- Generally uses facts, examples, explanations, analogies and sometimes statistical information, quotations and references as evidence.
- Chooses language, structure and sequence to make the message clear and unambiguous, so the sequencing of information is usually logical and predictable.
- Probably uses few adjectives, adverbs and images, except as examples or analogies in explanation.

Persuasive writing

- Manipulates the reader’s emotions and opinions to achieve a specific purpose, that is, to achieve a desired outcome or effect which is important to and selected by the writer.
- Persuasive techniques chosen are influenced by the nature of the target audience; that is, the language (vocabulary, sentence structures, style/register), structure and sequencing of the piece are framed with the particular audience and purpose in mind.
- Requires choice of the best word (with the precise shade of meaning and overtones of approval/disapproval, virtue/vice etc.), so range of vocabulary and dictionary technique are important.
- Aims in certain instances (e.g. advertisements) to keep the target audience unaware of being manipulated and adopts an appearance of objectivity and rationality by using indirect, subtle, secretive techniques; confidential, intimate, collaborative style and register.
- Sometimes uses exaggeration, extravagant language, and humour to create a conspiratorial relationship between the writer and the reader.
- Often uses the second person for direct address and appeal.
- Sometimes employs direct speech and questions to intensify the relationship with the audience.
- May use techniques such as the use of technical or scientific language and superlatives or quantitative statements to lend authority to the content.

Reflective writing

- Reflective writing is writing that is a personal response to experiences, thoughts, feelings, opinions, events or new information; it is an opportunity for the writer to gain self-knowledge and to understand and unravel his/her own feelings or ideas.
- A practice in which the writer describes a real or imagined scene, event, interaction, passing thought, memory, form, adding a personal reflection on the meaning of that item or incident, thought, feeling, emotion, or situation in his or her life.
- Reflective texts ponder, muse or reflect on events and experiences. They may be based on a description and analysis of a past experience or critical incident. The following are examples of reflective texts: memoirs, personal narratives, autobiographies and biographies, obituaries, and testimonials.
- Some guiding questions include "What did I notice?" "How has this changed me?" or "What might I have done differently?"
Evaluative writing

- Aims to reach a conclusion acceptable to an intelligent, unbiased reader through the logical presentation and discussion of facts and ideas.
- Presents two or more important aspects of an issue or sides of an argument and discusses these rationally and objectively; using evidence to support the contrasting sides or alternatives.
- Uses objective style; appeals to reason — not emotion; creation of an impression of balance and impartiality is essential.
- Often includes expressions of cause, consequence, opposition and concession.
